Why Play Khorne Daemonkin? [A quick Disclaimer: Daemonkin as an army only exist in 7th edition. Cheers Games Workshop. Because you're an old neckbeard who can remember the days of a unified codex for all the forces of Chaos, when daemons walked alongside marines.Or you could be thinking that the Warriors of Chaos had a neat deal on it thanks to The End Times merging them with Daemons ...

Bottom line is that this codex replaces the CSM codex for Khorne players, it is light years better. If this codex is any indication of what is to come for the other Chaos Gods then I think it will be a smashing couple of years for we Chaos players.

40K Armies: Khorne Daemonkin - Codex Review

Khorne Daemonkin fighting against Necrons. The Daemonkin dedicate every axe-blow struck and skull taken to their wrathful god. The devotion of these fanatical murderers is such that many warbands even emulate Khorne's daemonic cohorts in their martial structure, hoping that to do so will bring them closer to the hellish entities they see as the Blood God's chosen warriors.

Amen. 5th was a horridly stale and 1-dimensional game (and no, that isn't balance). 6th was a transitional mess. 7th is a blast, tournaments are having huge turnouts, and there's been a different looking top 8 every time - which means no one army or strategy is dominating.

Raptors are a pretty solid unit in the Khorne Daemonkin codex. They make a decent alternative to bikers, although most would agree that bikes are better than jump infantry. Raptors, like bikers, can take 2 special weapons in a squad. However, Raptors always count as having 2 close combat weapons as their specials do not replace anything.

Khorne Cultists will take delight in the new Khorne Daemonkin codex release, and the pre-orders are live now. Of course there are no model releases with it, but a codex has been a long time in the making, and my hopes are that it does really well with sales, so that we see the other Chaos God's releases in the near future.
